PP v. RAHMAT GHAZALI & ANOTHER APPEAL

COURT OF APPEAL, PUTRAJAYA
KAMALUDIN MD SAID JCA
RAVINTHRAN PARAMAGURU JCA
NORDIN HASSAN JCA
B [CRIMINAL APPEALS NO: B-09-147-04-2019
& A09-108-03-2019]
23 NOVEMBER 2020

C CRIMINAL PROCEDURE: Appeal – Notice of appeal – Notice of appeal filed by Public Prosecutor against decision of Magistrate's Court – Preliminary objection by accused that questions of law in notice of appeal not worded properly and not included in petition of appeal – Whether Public Prosecutor required to state questions of law in notice of appeal in respect of criminal appeals or revisions originating from Magistrate's Court – Courts of Judicature Act 1964, s. 50(2)

D CRIMINAL PROCEDURE: Appeal – Petition of Appeal – Petition of appeal filed by Public Prosecutor against decision of Magistrate's Court – Petition of appeal disclosed only issues of fact or issues of mixed fact and law – Whether petition of appeal must be confined to issues of law only – Whether in contravention of s. 50(2) of Courts of Judicature Act 1964

E The present appeals were in respect of two preliminary issues raised in two unrelated appeals from the Magistrate's Court. In the first appeal, the respondent was convicted, at the Magistrate's Court, for an offence under s. 354 of the Penal Code but was acquitted upon appeal to the High Court. The Public Prosecutor ('PP') filed a notice of appeal ('NOA') and, at the F outset of the hearing of the appeal, the respondent raised a preliminary objection, based on s. 50(2) of the Courts of Judicature Act 1964 ('CJA'), that the questions of law stated in the NOA were not properly worded and not included in the petition of appeal. In the second appeal, the respondent was acquitted, at the Magistrate's Court, from an offence under s. 41(1) of the G Road Transport Act 1987 and the High Court dismissed the PP's appeal against the decision. The respondent filed a notice of motion to strike out the appeal on the ground that the petition of appeal disclosed only issues of facts or issues of mixed facts and law. In other words, the respondent argued that the PP did not confine the appeal to issues of law only and, therefore, was H in contravention of s. 50(2) of the CJA. Based on the two appeals, the issues that arose for consideration were (i) whether the PP was required to state questions of law in the NOA in respect of criminal appeals or revisions that originate from the Magistrate's Court; and (ii) whether such appeals were only confined to questions of law.

I

Held (dismissing preliminary objection in first appeal; dismissing notice of motion in second appeal) A

Per Ravinthran Paramaguru JCA (for the majority):

(1) Appeals of the PP, from decisions of the Magistrate's Court in criminal matters that come before the Court of Appeal, are confined to issues of law only. Section 50 of the CJA gives jurisdiction to the Court of Appeal to hear appeals from criminal matters decided in the High Court and it includes appeals from the Sessions Court and the Magistrate's Court. However, s. 50(2) of the CJA provides (i) a limitation to the manner that appeals that emanate from the Magistrate's Court are brought to the Court of Appeal; (ii) generally and without qualification that 'an appeal shall lie to the Court of Appeal, with leave of the Court of Appeal'; and (iii) 'such appeal' shall only be confined to questions of law. Therefore, upon a plain reading of s. 50(2) of the CJA, two prerequisites apply to all appellants, regardless of the status as the PP or as the aggrieved accused person, namely (i) prior leave must be obtained from the Court of Appeal; and (ii) the appeal must be confined to questions of law. However, s. 50(3) of the CJA states that 'notwithstanding' s. 50(2) of the CJA, no leave is required in the case of an appeal by the PP. Section 50(3) of the CJA uses the word 'notwithstanding' when referring to the prerequisite of obtaining prior leave. It does not say that s. 50(2) of the CJA has no application at all to the appeal of the PP. (para 9) B C D E

(2) Regardless of whether the appeal of the PP is confined to questions of law only, there is no requirement to state questions of law in the NOA filed by the PP. In fact, an aggrieved person is not obligated to state his questions of law in the NOA either. None of the sub-sections of s. 50 of the CJA stipulate that questions of law must be stated in the NOA. Section 51 of the CJA, which stipulates what goes into a NOA, does not require questions of law to be stated in the case of appeals that emanate from the Magistrate's Court. However, since an accused aggrieved person is obliged to obtain leave to appeal in respect of a criminal matter that originates from the Magistrate's Courts, it follows that questions of law would have to be necessarily disclosed at the outset in the leave application under s. 50(2A) of the CJA. This is because s. 50(2) of the CJA enacts that the appeal that originates from the Magistrate's Court 'shall be confined to only questions of law which have arisen in the course of the appeal or revision and the determination of which by the High Court has affected the event of the appeal or revision'. (paras 10 & 11) F G H

Per Nordin Hassan JCA (dissenting):

(1) There is no requirement to state questions of law in the NOA filed by the PP and the PP's appeal must not be confined to only questions of law. Section 50(3) of the CJA provides that, notwithstanding sub-s. (2), no leave is required for the PP to appeal against the decision of the High I

Court in relation to any criminal matter decided by the Magistrate's Court. The word 'notwithstanding' in sub-s. 50(3) of the CJA needs no further interpretation as its literal meaning is clearly 'in spite of'. Clearly, in spite of anything contained in sub-s. 50(2) of the CJA, the PP is not required to obtain leave from the Court of Appeal in order to appeal against the decision of the High Court in respect of a decision on criminal matters by the Magistrate's Court. Further, sub-s. 50(3) of the CJA must be read together with sub-s. 50(2) and one of the key words in sub-s. 50(2) of the CJA are the words 'such appeal'. The words 'such appeal' in s. 50(2) of the CJA refer to the said appeal with the leave of the Court of Appeal which does not apply to the PP as the PP is exempted from obtaining leave pursuant to sub-s. 50(3) of the CJA. Hence, the appeal that is confined only to questions of law envisaged by sub-s. 50(2) of the CJA, is the appeal that requires leave which is only applicable to an accused person who intends to appeal against the decision of the High Court in respect of the criminal matter decided by the Magistrate's Court. (para 8)

(2) In interpreting s. 50 of the CJA, the purposive approach must be taken to ensure public interest is protected. This is also in consonance with s. 17A of the Interpretation Acts 1948 and 1967. The PP is the guardian and the last bastion of public interest. Public interest needs to be protected at all costs. In ensuring no injustice occurs in any case, even in the 'less serious' case, the power of the PP must not be curbed. In the present situation, the rights to appeal by the PP must not only be on questions of law but also on questions of fact or mixed law and facts in order to protect public interest. JUDGMENT

Ravinthran Paramaguru JCA (majority):

Introduction

[1] This judgment is in respect of two preliminary issues that were raised in the two unrelated appeals from the Magistrate's Court. We heard arguments on the said preliminary issues together as both issues turn upon the construction and effect of s. 50 of the Courts of Judicature Act 1964. Briefly stated, the issues that fall for determination here are whether the Public Prosecutor is required to state questions of law in the notice of appeal in respect of criminal appeals or revisions that originate from the Magistrate's Court and whether such appeals are only confined to questions of law. We were of the unanimous opinion that the Public Prosecutor is not required to state the questions of law in the notice of appeal. My learned brother Datuk Seri Kamaludin bin Md Said JCA and I were also of the opinion that the appeal of the Public Prosecutor must necessarily be confined to questions of law only. However, our learned brother Dato' Nordin bin Hassan JCA is of the view that the appeal of the Public Prosecutor can also address questions of fact as well.

Background Facts

[2] In Appeal No. B-09-147-04-2019 (PP v. Rahmat Ghazali), the respondent was convicted of an offence under s. 354 of the Penal Code. Upon appeal to the High Court, he was acquitted. The Public Prosecutor filed a notice of appeal against the acquittal. At the outset of the hearing of the appeal, learned counsel for respondent raised a preliminary objection based on s. 50(2) of the Courts of Judicature Act 1964. He submitted that the two questions of law stated in the notice of appeal were not "properly worded" and that the same were not included in the petition of appeal.

[3] In the second appeal, ie, Appeal No. A-09-108-03-2019 (PP v. Mohamad Pogi Abdul Lateb), the respondent was charged with an offence under s. 41(1) of the Road Transport Act 1987. The Magistrate acquitted the respondent and the High Court dismissed the appeal against the said decision. The respondent filed a notice of motion in encl. 25 to strike out the appeal on the ground that the petition of appeal discloses only issues of fact or issues of mixed fact and law. In other words, counsel for respondent argued that the appellant did not confine the appeal to issues of law only and therefore contravened s. 50(2) of the Courts of Judicature Act 1964. However, counsel for the respondent in the second appeal did not argue that issues of law must be stated in the notice of appeal.

Section 50

[4] Before discussing the arguments of the parties, for ease of reference, I reproduce below s. 50 of the Courts of Judicature Act 1964.

> 50. Jurisdiction to hear and determine criminal appeals
> (1) Subject to any rules regulating the proceedings of the Court of Appeal in respect of criminal appeals, the Court of Appeal shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine any appeal against any decision made by the High Court:
> 1. (a) in the exercise of its original jurisdiction; and
> 2. (b) in the exercise of its appellate or revisionary jurisdiction in respect of any criminal matter decided by the Sessions Court.
> (2) An appeal shall lie to the Court of Appeal, with the leave of the Court of Appeal, against any decision of the High Court in the exercise of its appellate or revisionary jurisdiction in respect of any criminal matter decided by a Magistrates' Court but such appeal shall be confined to only questions of law which have arisen in the course of the appeal or revision and the determination of which by the High Court has affected the event of the appeal or revision.
> (2A) An application for leave under subsection (2) shall be made within fourteen days after the date of the decision of the High Court.
> (3) Notice of any appeal by the Public Prosecutor shall be signed by the Public Prosecutor, the Solicitor General or any other officer authorised by the Public Prosecutor; and notwithstanding subsection (2) no leave of the Court of Appeal is required.
> (4) Except as otherwise provided in this section, an appeal may lie on a question of fact or a question of law or on a question of mixed fact and law.

[5] The learned DPP submitted that the Public Prosecutor's appeal is not limited to questions of law only and therefore there is no requirement to state any issue of law in the notice of appeal. His reasoning is based on ss. 50(2) and 50(3) of the Courts of Judicature Act 1964 and the Court of Appeal decision in PP v. Pasupathy Kanagasaby [2001] 2 CLJ 753; [2001] 2 MLJ 143. Section 50(2) states generally that leave is required for appeals and revisions that originate from the Magistrate's Court. It also states that such appeals shall be confined to only questions of law. However, s. 50(2) exempts the Public Prosecutor from the requirement of obtaining leave. He argued that the requirement of confining the appeal to questions of law is tied to the prerequisite of obtaining leave to appeal.

[6] In support, he cited the case of PP v. Pasupathy Kanagasaby (supra). In that case, Lamin Mohd Yunus PCA reasoned that "such appeal" in s. 50(2) refers to "appeal" that requires leave. For that reason, "such appeal" must satisfy the prerequisite of disclosing the existence of questions of law. However, as the Public Prosecutor is not required to obtain leave, he is not required to disclose questions of law. His Lordship also opined that therefore, the appeal of the Public Prosecutor is not limited to questions of law and he is at liberty "to re-examine every aspect of the case".

[7] On the other hand, counsel for respondent in the first appeal relied on the Court of Appeal case of PP v. Mahathir Muhammad [2013] 2 CLJ 50; [2013] 1 MLJ 50 where diametrically opposite views were expressed by Mohd Hishamudin JCA. His Lordship opined that the stipulation that appeals from Magistrate's Court in criminal matters must be confined to questions of law apply equally to accused persons as well as the Public Prosecutor. The Public Prosecutor is only exempted from applying leave to appeal under s. 50(3). If s. 50(3) also intended to exempt the Public Prosecutor from limiting his appeal to questions of law, the provision would have expressly stated so. In respect of the issue whether the Public Prosecutor must disclose questions of law at the outset in the notice of appeal, Mohd Hishamudin JCA said as follows:

> In our opinion, since the appeal can only be on a question of law – and it must be purely a question of law; and not a question of mixed law and fact – the pure question of law must be clearly set out in the notice of appeal itself. The question of law ought not to be withheld by the party appealing until the time comes for the filing and serving the petition of appeal. It would not be fair to the respondent in the appeal; it would be prejudicial to the respondent. From the time the notice of appeal is filed and right until the time when the petition of appeal is filed, the respondent should not be left wondering as to why the Public Prosecutor is still insisting on pursuing the matter against him.

Mohd Hishamudin JCA also referred to art. 8 of the Federal Constitution that states that all persons are equal before the law to support his argument that the Public Prosecutor should not be treated differently from an accused person.

Whether Appeal Of Public Prosecutor Is Confined To Questions Of Law Only?

[8] I have given careful consideration to the argument of the learned DPP that the leave requirement is tied to the requirement of limiting the appeal to questions of law. Section 50(2) contains the words "but such appeal shall be confined to questions of law". Learned DPP, argued that "such appeal" only refers to an appeal where leave of court is required. Since, the Public Prosecutor's appeal does not require leave, according to the learned DPP, his appeal need not be confined to questions of law. This was also the view of Lamin Mohd Yunus PCA in PP v. Pasupathy Kanagasaby (supra) that I mentioned earlier.

[9] In answering this question, I should think that it is important to read holistically all the sub-sections of s. 50. Section 50 gives jurisdiction to the Court of Appeal to hear appeals from criminal matters decided in the High Court and it includes appeals from Sessions Court and Magistrate's Court. However, s. 50(2) provides a limitation to the manner that appeals that emanate from Magistrate's Court are brought to the Court of Appeal. It must be noted that s. 50(2) provides generally and without qualification that "an appeal shall lie to the Court of Appeal, with leave of the Court of Appeal". It also enacts that "such appeal" shall only be confined to questions of law. Therefore, on a plain reading of s. 50(2), two prerequisites apply to all appellants regardless of their status as the Public Prosecutor or as the aggrieved accused person. The first prerequisite is that prior leave must be obtained from the Court of Appeal and the second prerequisite is that the appeal must be confined to questions of law. However, s. 50(3) states that "notwithstanding" s. 50(2), no leave is required in the case of an appeal by the Public Prosecutor. Section 50(3) uses the word "notwithstanding" when referring to the prerequisite of obtaining prior leave. It does not say that s. 50(2) has no application at all to the appeal of the Public Prosecutor. If words to that effect appear in s. 50(3), it is possible to argue that the Public Prosecutor is not only exempted from obtaining leave but is also exempted from limiting his appeal to questions of law. Therefore, on this point, I would respectfully agree with the reasoning of Mohd Hishamudin JCA but without the need to consider the equality provision of art. 8 of the Federal Constitution. For the same reason, with the greatest of respect, I would disagree with the reasoning of Lamin Mohd Yunus PCA who opined that the Public Prosecutor's appeal is not confined to questions of law as he is the custodian of public interest. To my mind, such an argument is tenable only if the clear provision of the law exempted the Public Prosecutor from the restriction that had been placed generally on all appellants by s. 50(2). Otherwise, one can also argue that the Public Prosecutor, by virtue of being the custodian of public interest, is exempted from other written provisions of the law as well which are of general application. In fact, as noted earlier, Parliament in enacting s. 50(3) specifically exempted the Public Prosecutor from applying for leave but did not go further than that and exempt him from confining his appeal to questions of law only. In the premises, I am of the view that appeals of the Public Prosecutor from decisions of the Magistrate's Court in criminal matters that come before this court are confined to issues of law only. As I said earlier, my learned brother Dato' Nordin bin Hassan JCA has a different opinion on this issue alone.

Whether Questions Of Law Must Be Disclosed In The Notice Of Appeal?

[10] In my opinion, regardless of whether the appeal of the Public Prosecutor is confined to questions of law only, there is no requirement to state questions of law in the notice of appeal filed by the Public Prosecutor. In fact, an aggrieved accused person is not obligated to state his questions of law in the notice of appeal either. None of the sub-sections of s. 50 stipulates that questions of law must be stated in the notice of appeal. Section 51 which stipulates what goes into a notice of appeal, does not require questions of law to be stated in the case of appeals that emanate from the Magistrate's Court. The provision reads as follows:

> 51. Notice of appeal
> (1) Every appeal shall be by notice in writing which shall be filed with the Registrar of the Court from which the appeal lies at the place where the decision appealed against was given within fourteen days after the date of the decision.
> (2) Every notice of appeal shall state shortly the substance of the judgment appealed against, shall contain an address at which any notices or documents connected with the appeal may be served upon the appellant or upon his advocate, and, except where the notice of appeal is given orally under section 54, shall be signed by the appellant or his advocate:
> Provided that, in a case of an appeal under subsection 50(2), the computation of the aforesaid period of fourteen days shall commence from the date immediately after leave has been granted by the Court of Appeal.

[11] However, since an accused aggrieved person is obliged to obtain leave to appeal in respect of a criminal matter that originates from the Magistrate's Court, it follows that questions of law would have to be necessarily disclosed at the outset in the leave application under s. 50(2A). This is because s. 50(2) enacts that the appeal that originates from the Magistrate's Court "shall be confined to only questions of law which have arisen in the course of the appeal or revision and the determination of which by the High Court has affected the event of the appeal or revision".

[12] For the above reasons, I would respectfully disagree with the view expressed in PP v. Mahathir Muhammad (supra) by Mohd Hishamudin JCA that the questions of law must be stated in the notice of appeal by the Public Prosecutor and that the accused would suffer prejudice if the same were only stated in the petition of appeal. With respect, I see no prejudice occasioned by the belated disclosure of the questions of law in the petition of appeal as given the various timeframes governing filing notice of appeal, petition of appeal and case management hearings, the appeal proper would only be set down for hearing after reasonable notice is given to all parties.

Conclusion

[13] In conclusion, in respect of the first appeal, we unanimously ruled that the alleged improperly worded questions of law in the notice of appeal is a non-issue as there is no requirement to state the same. We therefore dismissed the preliminary objection. In respect of the second appeal, we
B unanimously dismissed the notice of motion as the Public Prosecutor has disclosed some questions of law in the petition of appeal. In the premises, we ordered that the appeals in both cases to be heard on their merits.

Nordin Hassan JCA (dissenting):

C [14] I had the opportunity of reading through the grounds of judgment of my learned brother Ravinthran Paramaguru JCA in draft. I agree with his view that there is no requirement to state questions of law in the notice of appeal filed by the Public Prosecutor. However, contrary to Justice Ravinthran's opinion that the Public Prosecutor's appeal must confine to D only questions of law, I am of the view that it does not.

[15] The backgrounds and the facts of the two appeals had been well spelled out in Justice Ravinthran's judgment and need no repetition here.

[16] The core issue here, is whether an appeal by the Public Prosecutor
E against the decision of the High Court in respect of criminal matter decided by Magistrate's Court shall only confine to questions of law. In this regard, reference to the relevant provisions is pertinent in analysing and determination of the issue at hand. Section 50(2) and 50(3) of the Courts of Judicature Act 1964 which merit reproduction are as follows:

F (i) Section 50(2)

> An appeal shall lie to the Court of Appeal, with the leave of the Court of Appeal, against any decision of the High Court in the exercise of its appellate or revisionary jurisdiction in respect of any criminal matter decided by a Magistrate's Court but such appeal shall be confined to only questions of law which have arisen in the G course of the appeal or revision and the determination of which by the High Court has affected the event of appeal or revision.

(ii) Section 50(3)

> Notice of any appeal by the Public Prosecutor, the Solicitor General or any officer authorised by the Public Prosecutor; and H notwithstanding subsection (2) no leave of the Court of Appeal is required.
> (emphasis added)

[17] It is clear that s. 50(3) above stated, provides that, notwithstanding
I sub-s. (2), no leave is required for the Public Prosecutor to appeal against the decision of the High Court in relation to any criminal matter decided by the Magistrate's Court.

[18] The word 'notwithstanding' in sub-s. 50(3) need no further interpretation as its literal meaning is clear which means in spite of. The Federal Court in the case of Perbadanan Kemajuan Kraftangan Malaysia v. DW Margaret David Wilson [2010] 5 CLJ 899 had discussed the meaning of the word 'notwithstanding' as follows:

> [19] Before reverting to consider s. 35 PKKM Act 1979 it is provided in s. 35 LPA Act 1976 that the exclusive right of an advocate and solicitor to appear in all Court of Justice in Malaysia is subject to the Act 1979 itself as well as any other written law. This could be read with s. 35 Act 1979 which indicated earlier begins with the words "Notwithstanding …" The term "notwithstanding" means generally "not to stand against it", or "in the way" or overriding.
> (emphasis added)

[19] Clearly, in spite of anything contained in sub-s. 50(2), the Public Prosecutor is not required to obtain leave from the Court of Appeal in order to appeal against the decision of the High Court in respect of a decision on criminal matter by the Magistrate's Court.

[20] Further, sub-s. 50(3) must be read together with sub-s. 50(2) and one of the keywords in sub-s. 50(2), is the words "such appeal" which are the following:

> An appeal shall lie to the Court of Appeal, with the leave of the Court of Appeal, against any decision of the High Court in the exercise of its appellate or revisionary jurisdiction in respect of any criminal matter decided by a Magistrate's Court but such appeal shall be confined to only question of law which have arisen in the course of the appeal or revision and the determination of which by the High Court has affected the event of appeal or revision.
> (emphasis added)

[21] In my view, the words "such appeal" in s. 50(2) refers to said appeal with the leave of the Court of Appeal which does not apply to the Public Prosecutor as the Public Prosecutor is exempted from obtaining leave pursuant to sub-s. 50(3). Hence, the appeal that confined only to the questions of law envisaged by sub-s. 50(2), is the appeal that requires leave which only applicable to an accused person who intends to appeal against the decision of the High Court in respect of criminal matter decided by the Magistrate's Court.

[22] In regard to this issue, there are two conflicting views by this court in the case of PP v. Pasupathy Kanagasaby [2001] 2 CLJ 753; [2001] 2 MLJ 143 and PP v. Mahathir Muhammad [2013] 2 CLJ 50; [2013] 1 MLJ 50.

[23] It was held in Mahathir Muhammad's case (supra), that the notice of appeal filed by the Public Prosecutor must state the questions of law and the appeal by the Public Prosecutor must confine to only questions of law. The court was of the view that s. 50(3) only exempts the Public Prosecutor from

A obtaining leave to appeal and nothing more. Further, the court opined that if the Public Prosecutor can appeal to the Court of Appeal on question of fact or question of mixed law and fact but the accused can only appeal on questions of law, it would be discriminatory in nature against the accused and not in harmony with the spirit of art. 8 of the Federal Constitution.

B [24] Conversely, in Pasupathy's case, it was held that pursuant to sub-s. 50(3) and 50(2), the Public Prosecutor only needs to file a notice of appeal and the appeal by the Public Prosecutor does not confine to only questions of law. Lamin PCA, delivering the judgment of the court, had this to say:

C

> … Subsection (2), in my view was drafted especially for the benefit of an aggrieved accused person. As for the public prosecutor, he may avail himself of the provision of sub-s. (2) because the phrase 'notwithstanding sub-s. (2) found in sub-s. (3). When an accused person desires to appeal, the full force of sub-s. (2) comes into play. He has to apply for 'leave' and his appeal must be confined to only
> D questions of law which have arisen in the course of the appeal or revision and the determination of which by the High Court has affected the event of the appeal or revision.
> Now, sub-s. (2) states 'An appeal shall lie to the Court of Appeal, with the leave
> E of the Court of Appeal, but such appeal shall be confined to only questions of law.' (Emphasis added). The words 'such appeal' must refer to the appeal 'with the leave' or requiring leave. So sub-s. (2) is aimed to make provision for an appeal requiring leave. When leave is required to be applied for, it connotes that the applicant has to satisfy the court as to a certain condition; meaning that there must be a subject matter for arguments. In sub-s. (2), the applicant must show whether or not there
> F exist questions of law. So, the existence or otherwise of the questions of law is the subject matter for the submission before the court. The applicant as we have said earlier, is no other than the aggrieved accused person. On the other hand, the public prosecutor needs only to file a notice of appeal and for that purpose, it is expressly provided that no leave is required. That means there is nothing to submit before the court.
> G
> With respect, we are of the view therefore that the public prosecutor is not required to show to the court that there are questions of law which arisen in the course of the appeal or revision and the determination of which by the High Court has affected the event of the appeal or revision.
> (emphasis added)

H [25] I am in agreement with the view in Pasupathy's case and more so the Public Prosecutor is the guardian and the last bastion of public interest. Public interest needs to be protected at all costs. In ensuring no injustice occurs in any case, even in the 'less serious' case, the power of the Public Prosecutor must not be curbed. In the present situation, the rights to appeal

I by the Public Prosecutor must not only on questions of law but also on question of fact or mixed law and fact in order to protect public interest.

[26] Take an example of an offence of outraging modesty under s. 354 of the Penal Code, as in the case before us in Criminal Appeal No: B-09-147-04-2019, as the High Court wrongly disturbed the finding of facts by the Magistrate's Court and overturned the decision of the Magistrate against the established evidence, the Public Prosecutor must have the rights to appeal in order to ensure justice to the victim. The Public Prosecutor must not be seen helpless although injustice was detected in a case. This is certainly not the intention of Parliament in enacting s. 50 of the Courts of Judicature Act 1964. In Mahathir Muhammad's case, it was said that there is very minimal risk of real injustice if appeal to Court of Appeal should only confine to questions of law. However, a minimal risk is still a risk of real injustice which should not be allowed in our justice system.

[27] On the issue of guardian of public interest, this court in Peguam Negara Malaysia v. Nurul Izzah Anwar & Ors [2017] 5 CLJ 595 had explained and held as follows:

> (2) The appellant had locus standi and a special right to appeal in the public interest. The appellant was undeniably a party at the leave application. His presence was required by law without being made a party to the proceedings. The relevant provision is found in O. 53 r. 3(3) of the Rules of Court 2012 which makes it mandatory for the applicant to give notice of the application to the Attorney General's Chambers. A failure to comply with the mandatory requirement to serve the cause papers on the Attorney General would result in the application being dismissed. It also makes the Attorney General the party representing the public interest at the point when the leave application is heard. Hence, when he appears before the court at that stage, the court has to recognise his presence and has no jurisdiction not to hear him. The putative party, the EC, was not a party at that particular point. The appellant's position as guardian of public interest at this stage would necessarily include the right to appeal against an order granting leave. (emphasis added)

[28] Although the above case is an election petition's case, the principle therein is relevant to the issue in the present case.

[29] It is my view that in interpreting s. 50 of the Courts of Judicature Act 1964, the purposive approach must be taken to ensure public interest is protected. This is also in consonance with s. 17A of the Interpretation Acts 1948 and 1967 which states:

> In the interpretation of a provision of an Act, a construction that would promote the purpose or object underlying the Act (whether the purpose or object is expressly stated in the Act or not) shall be preferred to a construction that would not promote the purpose or object.

[30] In a recent Federal Court case of Benjamin William Hawkes v. PP [2020] 8 CLJ 267; [2020] 5 MLJ 417, the court adopted the purposive approach in interpreting s. 51A of the CPC and held that the word "shall" therein is not mandatory but only directory in nature. Zabariah Yusof FCJ delivering the judgment of the court said this:

> [48] The purposive rule of interpretation must be adopted in interpreting s. 51A of the CPC, pursuant to s. 17A of the Interpretation Acts 1948 and 1967 …
> [49] It is clearly untenable in this case to allude to the word 'shall' as mandatory, thus stultifying the justice of the case, when the document was not delivered to the accused persons before the commencement of the trial. (emphasis added)

[31] Likewise in the instant case, for the interest of justice which the Public Prosecutor is tasked to protect, the interpretation of s. 50 of the Courts of Judicature Act 1950 that allows the Public Prosecutor to appeal on questions of law or fact or mixed law and facts must be adopted.

[32] Next, on the issue of equality before the law as enshrined under art. 8 of the Federal Constitution, our law accepted the doctrine of classification on the basis that the classification is permissible if it is founded on an intelligible differentia and the differentia has a rational relation to the object of the impugned law.

[33] The meaning of intelligible differentia and its application has been explained in the case of PP v. Harmenderpall Singh Jagara Singh [2007] 2 CLJ 577; [2007] 3 MLJ 433 as follows:

> [61] Going by the Oxford English Dictionary, 'intelligible' means: capable of understanding (not by senses) that may be apprehended by intellect, and 'differentia' means: the attribute by which a species is distinguished from all other species of the same genus; a distinguishing mark or character. In this instance, the differentia must have a rational relation to the object sought to be achieved by the statute in question. The classification may therefore be founded on a different basis, namely geographical or according to objects or occupations or the like. What is necessary is that there must be a nexus between the basis of classification and the object of the Act. The classification should never be arbitrary, artificial or evasive. It must rest always upon real and substantive distinction bearing a reasonable and just relation to the thing in respect to which the classification is made for otherwise the classification made would be without any reasonable basis – Mukherjee J in Anwar Ali Sarkar's case 1952 AIR 75 and quoted in Public Prosecutor v. Su Liang Yu [1976] 1 LNS 113; [1976] 2 MLJ 128 at p. 130. (emphasis added)

[34] This doctrine of classification is further explained by Suffian LP in Datuk Hj Harun Hj Idris v. PP [1976] 1 LNS 19 (FC) as follows:

7. In India discriminatory law is good law if it is based on 'reasonable' or 'permissible' classification, using the words used in the passage reproduced above from the judgment in Shri Ram Krishna Dalmia, provided that:

(i) the classification is founded on an intelligible differentia which distinguishes persons that are grouped together from others left out of the group; and

(ii) the differentia has a rational relation to the object sought to be achieved by the law in question. The classification may be founded on different bases such as geographical, or according to objects or occupations and the like. What is necessary is that there must be a nexus between the basis of classification and the object of the law in question.

The Solicitor-General submits that if the Indian doctrine of classification is to be accepted by our courts, which he argues has not been done, it may be accepted subject to the modification that the courts should not take it upon itself to consider whether the classification is reasonable or not, a task which should be left to the legislature. In our opinion the doctrine of classification should be accepted by our courts, subject to what we said in paragraph 6 above. We adhere to what was said in Public Prosecutor v. Khong Teng Khen at page 170.

[35] Reverting to the present case, sub-s. 50(2) of the Courts of Judicature Act 1964 applies to all accused who intend to file an appeal against the decision of the High Court in respect of criminal matter decided by the Magistrate's Court. Hence, the classification is reasonable and permissible and does not infringe art. 8 of the Federal Constitution.

[36] On the same issue, Richard Malanjum FCJ in Ooi Kean Thong & Anor v. PP [2006] 2 CLJ 701 had this to say:

As regards art. 8 judicial pronouncement on the scope of this article has been 'that equality before the law' requires that the cases of all potential defendants to criminal charges shall be given unbiased consideration by the prosecuting authority and that decision whether or not to prosecute in a particular case for a particular offence should not be indicated by some irrelevant consideration. Article 8(1) does not forbid discrimination in punitive treatment between one class of individuals and another class in relation to which there is some difference in the circumstances of the offence that has been committed'. (See: Nadaraiah v. PP [2000] 4 CLJ 634; Public Prosecutor v. Tengku Mahmood Iskandar [1973] 1 LNS 124; [1973] 1 MLJ 128).

Hence the reliance on art. 8 by learned counsel in our view has no merit as there is no assertion that the applicants were singled out by DBKL in relation to the enforcement of the impugned by-law. There was also no allegation that irrelevant consideration was taken into account when DBKL decided to issue the summons to the applicants.

Accordingly it is our judgment that the impugned by-law does not infringe any of the rights as enshrined in articles 5 or 8 of the Constitution.

A

Conclusion

[37] In conclusion, it is my view that besides the Public Prosecutor is not required to state questions of law in the notice of appeal for an appeal against the decision of the High Court in respect of criminal matter decided by the Magistrate's Court, the appeal by the Public Prosecutor is also not confined to only questions of law. The Public Prosecutor can raise question of fact or mixed law and fact in their appeal.
